INDIAN CREW OF THE YUKON STEAMER HAMILTON CARRYING WOOD ABOARD.

[Drawn by Max Newberry, Special Artist of the HERALD'S Expedition to the Klondike Gold Fields.]

KLONDIKERS ON BOARD THE BELLA.

A party of four miners from Dawson City, bringing out $80,000 in gold dust, packed in bags and a valise, took four hour watches, with rifle in hand, guarding the treasure. Sketched by Max Newberry, special artist of the HERALD'S expedition to the Klondike gold fields.

GOLD MINING ALONG THE YUKON.

Mrs. Elizabeth Brough accompanied a party of prospectors over a very rough trail, thirty miles, to Hunter Creek, where she staked claim No. 58. After it was staked an old miner shovelled a panful of gravel from the creek bed and "panned out" several "colors," or particles of gold.

[Drawn by Max Newberry, Special Artist of the HERALD's Expedition to the Klondike Gold Fields.]

AN ALASKAN ABORIGINAL.

[From a Sketch by Max Newberry, the HERALD's Artist in Alaska.]

tres with food and tools, and so have done nothing in the way of establishing new posts with a view to building up trade.

FROM KLONDIKE IN A CAN.

$15,000,000 FOR BROOKLYN TRUST

TIN BOX IN WHICH HERALD'S DRAWINGS COME FROM THE KLONDIKE.

A FUNERAL IN THE KLONDIKE.

Members of the Yukon Order of Pioneers Burying a Dead Comrade in Their Cemetery in the Hills Back of Dawson City.

[Drawn for the HERALD by Max Newberry, the Only Special Artist Who Has Sent Pictures Direct from the Gold Fields.]

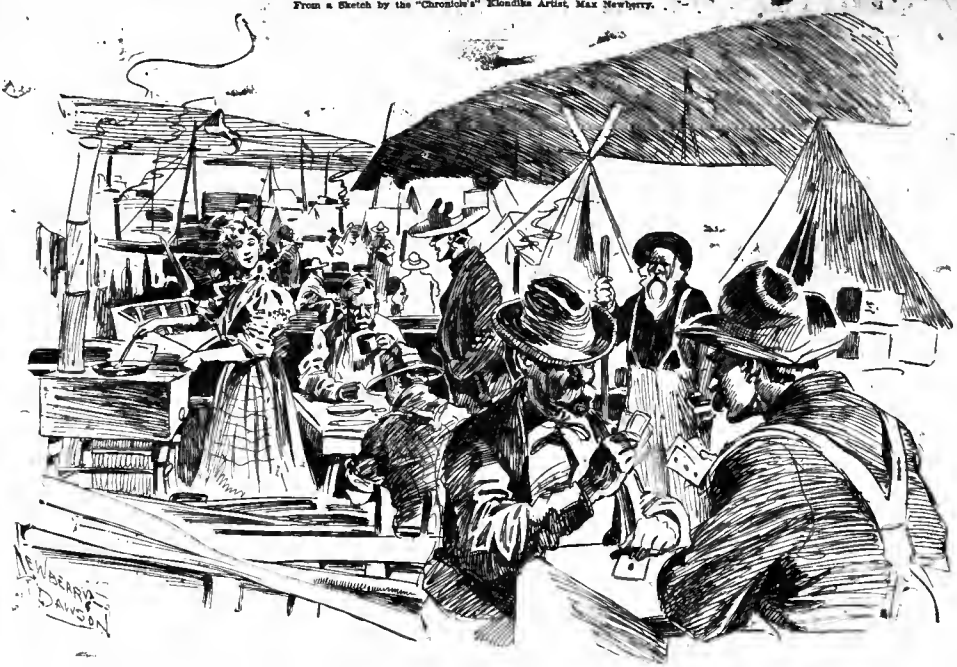
Max W. Newberry, the Artist, Who Is Going to the Klondike for the "Chronicle."

Miners Bringing a Sick Comrade From "The Gulch" to the Hospital at Dawson City.

Snapshots in Dawson City Streets.

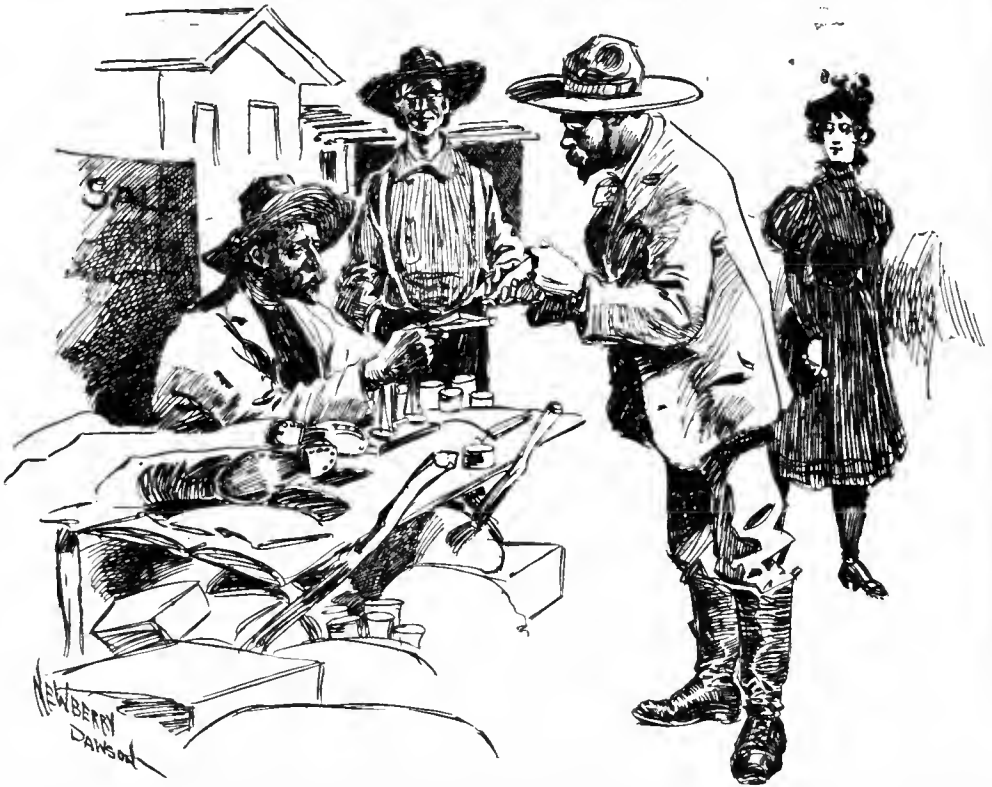
SCOW LIFE ON THE RIVER FRONT AT DAWSON

From a Sketch by the "Chronicle's" Klondike Artist, Max Newberry.



TENDERFEET SELLING THEIR OUTFITS IN DAWSON CITY.

(From a sketch made by Max Newberry, the "Chronicle's" special artist.)



A great many of the "chee chacos" (new arrivals) brought in goods in excess of their own needs, and Front street is lined with rough stands where these goods are on sale. A number are selling all their outfits and "going out." The prices vary from day to day, each merchant carefully watching his neighbor and meeting every cut in price.

DAWSON CITY MINERS WATCHING THE ARRIVAL OF A STEAMER FROM DOWN THE RIVER.

(Sketched by Max Newberry, the "Chronicle's" special artist on the Klondike.)